Be sure to catch this cross-cultural production that combines wayang kulit (shadow puppetry), modern dance choreography and fusion gamelan music to tell a tale based on Javanese version of Ramayana. This modern take on wayang kulit will feature three dhalangs (puppeteers) instead of one, coupled with animations by Kotak Ide Studio (Indonesia).

The bewitching live score written by Indonesian composer Angger Widhi Asmara and Prisha Bashori Musthofa, infuses traditional Indonesian musical scales with elements of Chinese, Indian, Malay and Western chamber music, and will be conjured by the Angger Gamelan Ensemble (Indonesia), Gamelan Asmaradana (Singapore) and Singapore chamber musicians.

The characters are performed by dancers from Pamenang Dance Community (Indonesia) and Peneroka Daya Tari (Singapore), drawing inspiration from Javanese, Kalimantan, Malay and modern dance choreography. Cupu Manik Astagina: The Sacred Jewel Box is an artistic exploration that combines traditional and modern elements to tell a story first told 500 years ago.

This is shown in the varied backgrounds and ethnicities of the ensemble's members.

The Current/s We Call Home | Arus Berlabuh Kita

Asian Civilisations Museum

29 June 2018 to 2 December 2018

The Current/s We Call Home | Arus Berlabuh Kita is a collaborative work by Indonesian and Singaporean artists Budi Agung Kuswara (Kabul) and Samantha Tio (Mintio), working together with the participation of families living between both countries. Integral to the creation of this work is the artists' process of forging connections (and reconnections) between the families living and traveling between Indonesia and Singapore, threading together personal narratives into a larger whole that speaks of and to the diasporic experience.

Inspired by the folk melody of "Dayung Sampan", a tune popular in Singapore as well as Indonesia, the work imagines a voyage across the sea captained by children from both countries. The motif of the 'layar' (a traditional sail) sets the scene for this seafaring adventure; interweaving through space, these sails suggest the movement of water as well as the maritime journey.

Pictured on these sails are images of children who live between Singapore and Indonesia: young adventurers who have embraced these currents -- this in-between space -- as 'home'. Their fluid world harks back to the shared histories of the region, to a time when the exchange of goods, ideas and cultures were carried along on the currents of the sea -- a narrative explored at the Asian Civilisations Museum's Tang Shipwreck gallery. The whorled texture on the sails comes from the bark fibre of the banana tree which is found in both Singapore and Indonesia, suggesting a tapestry of interwoven histories and futures that carries these young seafarers on their shared journey.
